

The promotion of terror through otherness?

A conceptualisation of the digital terro-media system of Islamic State:

The communicative dimension of terrorism

- Communication of terrorism:
Alleged symbiotic interdependence of media and terrorism (Rada, 1985; Clutterbuck, 1981; Schmidt and Graaf, 1982 and which is contested (Wieviorka, 1988)
- Terrorism as communication:
A process that is communicative and rhetorical.
(Heath, 2008; Matusitz, 2013)
- Communication as terrorism:
Reflected in law enforcement against communicative crimes. A digital terro-media system?

A digital other

- From 2014 , a media mythology/orthodoxy emerges of an extreme digital other, a black box of social media communications that takes young people from the streets of West Yorkshire and East London to Syria.
- “A huge proportion of them use social media.” (Jones, 2014).
- This extreme digital other is presented as incomprehensible and IS are “masters of the digital universe” (Atwan, 2015:15) and deploy “vast numbers of digital fighters” (Cohen, 2015: 53).

Research Questions

- RQ 1: What rhetoric and messages are used in the communications of Islamic State?
- RQ2: What media systems is used by Islamic State?

Methodology

1. Historical institutionalism approach (Hall and Taylor, 1996; Sandhu, 2015; Bentele and Wiesenburg, 2016) approach to define the case/institution, agents of support, ideas/messages, mechanisms of communication and outcomes.
2. Contemporary historical examination of documents and communications artefacts against social context.

Strategy,
Operations and Identity

Core
IS Ideology

Recruitment
Message
Origination

Verbal Channel:

Rhetoric of inclusion versus experience of exclusion
(as others in West)

Dabiq Issue 11

Media & Distribution System
Islamic State Institute of Public Information – Abu Mohammed al-Adnani

- Verbal Content
- Dabiq magazine
  - Radio
  - Dawn of Glad Tidings radio app.
  - Ajnad Media Foundation nasheeds or anthems

- Visual Content
- Al-Hayat Media Center videos
  - Al-Furqan Media Center videos
  - Al I'tsam Media videos

Audiences

Disengaged	Sympathetic	Committed
------------	-------------	-----------

Scan & listen
Empathise & engage

Engage
Customised to individual interests

Action
Migrate to caliphate to wage holy war

Recruitment Messages Packaging and Distribution

Recruitment Communications and Process

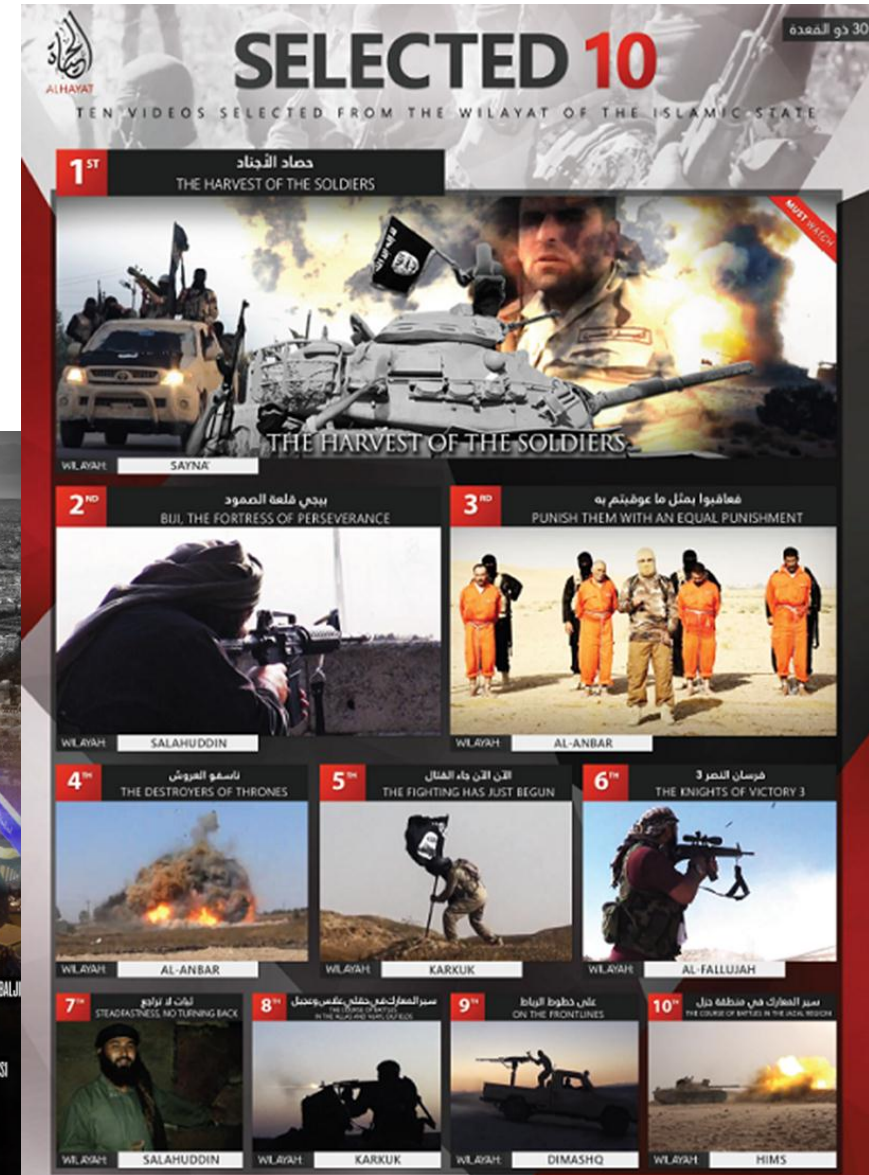

Online automation, algorithms and personal engagement with potential recruits

Visual Channel:

1. Rhetoric of empowerment, statehood, dignity - and revenge for exclusion and humiliation - via digital artefacts of fear.

2. Encouraging to sympathetic audience and terrifying to the disengaged.

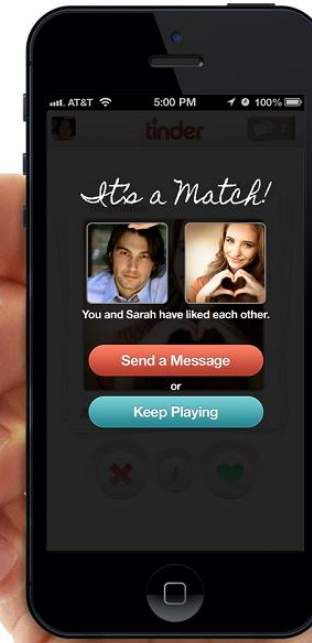

Strategy, Operations and Identity

Core IS Ideology

Recruitment Message Origination

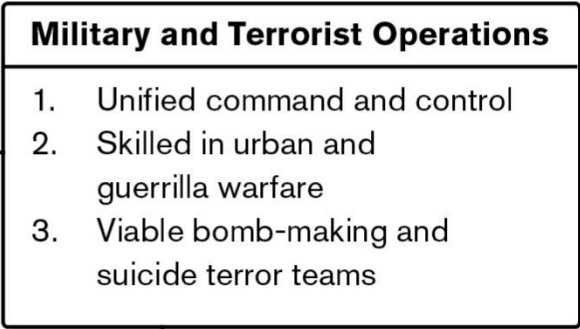

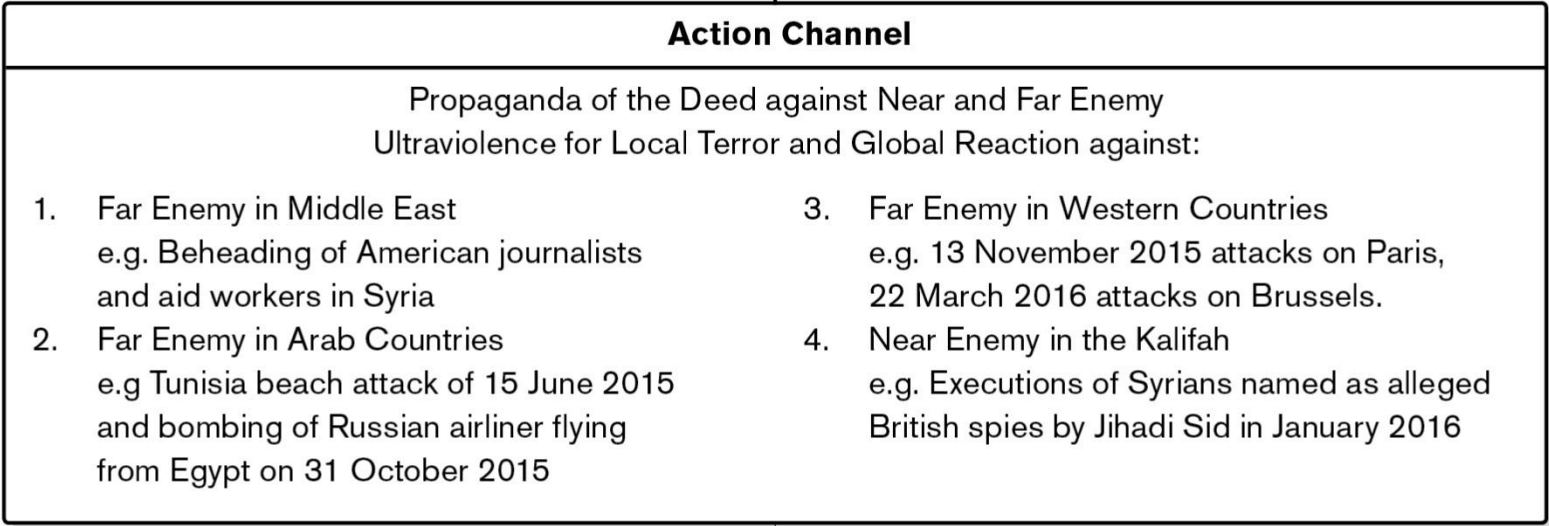

Recruitment Messages Packaging and Distribution

Recruitment Communications and Process

Conclusion and Implications

- The duality of IS communications differentially targets uncommitted/disengaged and sympathetic audiences in ways that generate fear, alienation and suspicion in uncommitted and inclusion, power and sense of success in sympathetic and committed audiences.
- IS rhetoric annexes aspects of otherness imposed on Muslims in the West
- The aim appears to be to exploit otherness for strategic gain by achieving irreconcilable separateness between the uncommitted audience and the audience that is sympathetic and committed to IS.

Conclusion and Implications

- IS rhetoric encourages internalisation of self-image of the stigma of otherness in young Muslims (in terms used by Wolfgang Lipp in Sociology of Deviance, 1977) and offers redemption via paternal charisma of IS leadership or heroic charisma of action.

“A person can very well build up their identity by actively adopting the very features that are normally viewed as marks of culpable outsiderhood. This self stigmatization is the source of all charisma.”

Evolving Seriality of Islamic Terror

Group	Leader	Personal Style	Propaganda Approach
Hizbullah	Hassan Nasrallah  (1992-present)	Political, wide-ranging, charismatic and subtle charm. A cleric but not overtly religious or fiery in style, emphasising Arab dignity. Reasonable style seeking legitimisation of cause.	Segmented for multiple audiences. Interviews with Western media such as The New Yorker, Washington Post plus video interview with Julian Assange for Wikileaks.
Al-Qaeda	Osama Bin Laden  (1988-2011)	Educated, modest, sound strategic thinker. Not overtly religious. Committed to propaganda of the deed against near land and far land enemies.	Indirect via media initially, including interviews. Repetition of mantras on death cult and human sacrifice (death is truth and ultimate destiny). Release of videos to Al Jazeera and others came later.
Al-Qaeda in Iraq	Abu Musab al-Zarqawi  (2004-2006)	Ill-educated, criminal, headstrong and a poor communicator. Highly dogmatic and extreme with experience as terrorist leader in homeland of Jordan.	Relied on violence and visual depictions of beheadings etc. to communicate power and induce fear.
Al-Qaeda in the Arab Peninsula	Nasir al-Wuhayshi  (2009-2015)	Yemini served as secretary to Osama bin Laden in Afghanistan and had lengthy combat experience. Killed by US drone strike in June 2015 in Yemen.	Used video to make threats of violence in order to defend Islam. AQAP has published Inspire magazine in English under al-Malahem Media since 2010.

Introduction

The would-be bombers of Walthamstow

By Dominic Casciani
BBC News

© 8 July 2010 | UK

Found Guilty: Ibrahim Savant, Arafat Waheed Khan and Waheed Zaman

Image 2 of 2

A tape found in the prayer room