This part of the submission presents documentation of the works completed as part of the research, from 2008 to 2014.

The works are organised chronologically in sections. The sections revolve around solo exhibitions, some group exhibitions, open studios, and temporary one-day installations. Works completed without forming part of a specific exhibition or event, are included in sections called “Studio.”

A list of works follows at the end, indicating on which pages specific groups of works are documented.

Stain Painting, 2008–2009
Acrylic on found vinyl flooring
62 x 48 cm

The work involved remaking stains found on my studio’s floor onto a found piece of vinyl flooring. The stains were painted using small irregular marks to match, to an extent, the existing printed marks on the vinyl.

Stain Painting (detail), 2009
Acrylic on vinyl flooring
31.5 x 55.5 cm

This stain painting was based on stains found on a section of the floor of the gallery. The work was cut in situ so as to fit exactly onto the side of an electricity box found at one of the corners of the space.

Graphite on unprimed canvas, graphite on cardboard, acrylic on found vinyl flooring
60 x 115 cm

The drawing on the cardboard involved shading the entire surface evenly with graphite so as to accentuate its texture.

The image painted on the vinyl is most visible when light is reflected off the surface. This allows the brushstrokes to reveal themselves.

Leftovers I

One-day installation, Camberwell College of Arts, London, UK
2010
Leftovers I (installation view), 2010

The works were installed on the walls on the left and right, facing each other. They were placed amidst all the objects already found in the project space.
The works installed on the right wall included Shadow Pieces, graphite drawings on cardboard, and drawings on textured paper. The drawings on textured paper involved following the texture of the paper with a small brush or pencil.
The works installed on the left wall included graphite drawings on cardboard, Stain Paintings, and drawings on wood and wallpaper. The works on wood involved drawing wood rings over pre-existing oil stains on the surface. The works on wallpaper involved painting brown lines over specific parts of the texture that resembled vertical lines, thus, accentuating that texture.

Leftovers II

Works made for group exhibition Chypre 2010, L'Art au Présent, Espace Commines, Paris, France

2010
Leftovers II, 2010

Acrylic on wallpaper, acrylic on found furnishing fabric, adhesive vinyl collages on board, acrylic on laminate flooring, acrylic on vinyl flooring, graphite on unprimed cotton

127 x 135 x 145 cm

This work involved recreating traditional Cypriot embroidery patterns on a variety of modern surfaces used in the home. Most of these surfaces were found at houses and factories in Cyprus. The embroidery pattern recreated on these surfaces looks like a flower and was widely used in a specific type of traditional Cypriot embroidery (Lefkaritika).

Shadow Piece (installation view), 2010
Graphite on handmade paper
21.5 x 21.5 cm

This work was installed on the wall, at the inner corner of a group of pre-existing paint stains. The stains formed a rectangle where a past resident artist must have placed a painting or drawing to work on it.
Untitled (installation view), 2010

Adhesive vinyl collage on wall, adhesive vinyl on wood, acrylic on vinyl flooring
56 x 40 x 23 cm

The work involved adding wood growth rings on pieces of wood and sheets of adhesive vinyl. These rings run perpendicular to the pre-existing rings. The work on vinyl flooring involved recreating a scratch on the vinyl. This scratch was partially covered by the vinyl.
Wrinklegrams I (installation view), 2010
Acrylic on graph paper
21 x 29.7 cm each

The work involved crumpling up sheets of graph paper and painting lines over all the wrinkles. The painted lines approximated the colour of the printed lines on the graph paper.
Untitled (installation view), 2010
Adhesive vinyl on table and floor

The work involved adding wood growth rings and lines, cut from wood-patterned sheets of adhesive vinyl, on the wooden floor of the studio and on a wood-patterned table. The “rings” added to the floor were placed next to pre-existing floor stains, echoing their location and direction.

Wall Drawing I, 2010
Coloured pencils on wall
220 x 270 cm (wall size)

The work entailed drawing over pre-existing paint stains (all the red stains) on one of the walls of the studio. The drawn lines within each stain followed the texture of the wall while the colour of the drawn lines matched the colour of the paint stains.
Vice Versa, 2010
Graphite on found wooden box
46 x 30.5 x 14 cm

The work involved drawing the wood rings found on the outer side of the base of the box on the inner side of the box and vice versa. The drawing, thus, reverses the two sides of the base of the box.

The installation comprises of seventeen drawings made during seventeen days, one drawing each morning. Each drawing captures the shadows formed on the paper due to the light in the studio. The shadows were drawn using continuous pencil lines that followed the uneven texture of the paper.

Masquetry I (detail), 2011

This collage was based on an Art Nouveau cupboard design from 1910 by Louis Majorelle. The design was recreated as an adhesive vinyl collage. Pieces of vinyl were cut to approximate the various shapes of the design. These were then placed over an identical intact piece of vinyl, at their corresponding place.
Minor Fix (detail), 2011
Adhesive vinyl on floor
426 x 376 cm (floor size)

The work involved covering scratches on the floor with adhesive vinyl that was cut to match the shapes of the scratches.

Light Capture (Attempt #1) (installation view), 2012
Clear tape on packing paper
11 x 12 cm

The work involved identifying and tracing over any highlights I could see on the piece of paper, as it was placed on the desk. Pieces of clear tape were cut, by hand, to match these highlighted areas. These pieces were then placed over the corresponding areas on the paper. The pieces of tape reveal themselves when they shine in light. The collage was placed next to a pre-existing piece of paper that was taped on the wall, probably by a previous occupant of the space.
Wall Drawing II, 2012
Coloured pencils on wall
450 x 550 cm (wall size)

Two of the walls in the space had paint marks on them in the form of small dots. The previous artist must have had unprimed cloth hanging on the wall and the paint leaked through the cloth and onto the wall. The drawn marks become a “connect-the-dots” drawing, recreating the traces of the painted image left behind.
Stain Collages (installation view), 2012
Adhesive vinyl on found vinyl flooring
33 x 45 cm, 30 x 51 cm
These works involved recreating floor stains and scratches onto pieces of vinyl flooring using adhesive vinyl. In one case, a paint stain partially covered by the vinyl was recreated on the vinyl as a collage. In another case, a group of scratches were recreated on a piece of vinyl which was then placed near the scratches.
Stain Collage (installation view), 2012

Faulty Samples (installation view), 2012
Fabric collages and acrylic on fabric samples

The works involved interventions on a group of fabric samples obtained from fabric and home furnishing stores. The pre-existing pattern on each sample was disrupted or a new pattern was created by adding pieces of the same kind of fabric on top of the printed image or by painting over parts of the image.

This is an ongoing series of collages. It involves punching holes out of lined A4 paper and gluing the punched out chads on other sheets of the same type of paper. The choice of a hole puncher directly relates to the paper, its use, and its existing holes. When gluing the chads on lined paper, I try to either recreate the existing lines, even if imperfectly, or disrupt and redirect them.
Marble Obsessions

Works made for group exhibition Paradox Fabric, Museo Memoria de Andalucía, Granada, Spain

2013
Years Later (partial view), 2013
Adhesive vinyl on floor
500 x 500 cm

Macael marble, which is extracted from quarries in Almería, Andalucía, is widely used as flooring in Granada. This work involved recreating damaged marble tiles that were photographed at various locations in Granada. The scratches and other damage were recreated using adhesive vinyl that resembled marble. The vinyl was cut into pieces matching the shapes of the photographed scratches. These pieces were then adhered onto a section of the floor of the museum.

This installation was originally made for Museo Memoria de Andalucía in Granada, Spain. It was made out of leftover vinyl flooring and old flooring samples found at local stores in Granada. I also made a series of adhesive vinyl collages based on tessellations found at the Nasrid Palaces in Alhambra.

Rain (March 26, 2014, 3:00–4:30 pm) (installation view), 2014
Acrylic medium on glass
30 x 40 cm, 35 x 50 cm

To make this work, I left the pieces of glass outside during a rainy day, between 3 and 4:30 pm. The glass was then returned to the studio and left to dry. In the following days, I recreated the raindrops by painting over the traces left on the glass. The works were installed leaning against the window, with the constructed raindrops shown on the front side of the glass, towards the interior of the space.
The other end of the room had two inlaid dark-brown lines running along the wall. I recreated those lines on this end of the room using adhesive vinyl.

The collage on the floor was based on a section of the floor by the opposite wall and across from my installation.
Arches (details), 2014
Graphite on wall

This drawing involved duplicating wall cracks. The drawn cracks were made right next to each wall crack, on either side. Most of the wall cracks ran vertically along the walls while near the ceiling they ran horizontally across the room. As such, they seemed to form arches on the walls. The drawn marks subtly accentuate these “arches.” The drawing spread over all the walls in the room, including behind other works installed in the space.
