

DOWNLOAD MAGAZINES

05: Art and Crime

PRINT MAGAZINES

04: The Body

SUBSCRIPTIONS

03: Art and Resistance

ART EVENTS

Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa	Su
				1	2	3
4	5	6	7	8	9	10
11	12	13	14	15	16	17
18	19	20	21	22	23	24
25	26	27	28	29	30
«	<	Nov 2019	>	»

UPCOMING

Ithell Colquhoun: Surrealism, Occultism & Sexuality
 Watch This Space
 A Celebration of Talk Talk and Mark Hollis
 Bang Face Rave Weekend

Decolonising Higher Education, But What Does it Mean?

13/02/2018 Michael Eden News

The term 'decolonising' has begun to be used in higher education institutions and it expresses in part a desire for a wider range of voices to be included in curriculums.

This is a good thing. The term though is problematic: assumptions about what the so-called 'colonial attitude' is which needs deactivating is difficult to fully pin down.

"You may have recently read false news reports that SOAS students have called for the removal of white philosophers such as Plato and Kant from their reading lists. It bears repeating that these reports are untrue – they are calling for a greater representation of non-European thinkers, as well as better historical awareness of the contexts in which scholarly knowledge has been produced," Dr Meera Sabaratnam, www.soas.ac.uk

Dr Sabaratnam's piece about the way the SOAS student intervention was covered by the press is a very good place to start. The combative term is immediately detoxified, fake news exposed and there is a breakdown of the reasonable ways that 'decolonisation' would improve the student experience.

At the University of Arts London the term is also employed and less context is offered.

"Contributions can relate to the following questions:

- Why/How to decolonise art and design?
- Why/How to decolonise university life?
- Why/How to decolonise academia?
- Why/How to decolonise curricula?
- Why/How to decolonise pedagogy?" call-for-zine-submissions-decolonising-the-arts-curriculum

This comes from a call-out to students and staff and first thoughts are it is part of a drive to improve student relations with the texts they have to read and the lectures they attend. The lack of context, though, is dangerous and almost feels that it is tempting the kind of malignant reporting that SOAS suffered from.

The Empire and the Canon

The problem with the term 'decolonisation' is it implies that the universities in question are colonial that they are part of an empire which has a role in perpetuating certain values for the benefit of an elite. This elite, because of the word 'decolonisation', is also implied to be racially white.

Firstly we might ask, is this true? Secondly, is the term employed as a way of embarrassing institutions into widening their breadth of subject matter and contributing lecturers? If it is true, then actual examples would help people to feel less defensive about exactly what it is in the culture that has to be purged.

For example it would be a great shame if 'Plato's Cave' came off the curriculum for undergraduate theory because it was seen as perpetuating a Eurocentric idea of selfhood and agency. If someone said, though, that a lecturer wanted to teach a unit on Black Modernism and was told by his superior, 'well there isn't really any point, it's not relevant to enough of the students', then that would be a clear obstruction from a place of lazy bias.

Are There Any Universal Values?

Suffragette Emmeline Pankhurst

It's 100 years since (some) women were given the vote. This came from a long and often bloody fight with authorities; we take great pride in those women and rightly so. Perhaps we should see decolonisation as a similar fight for the inclusion of new values into the canon?

Can we therefore say that equality for women is an absolute, even when it jars with the customs or religious views of other cultures? Is that assertion the result of a colonial education and a Eurocentric moral superiority complex? These are the kinds of questions which don't sit so well in the trendy, right-on narratives which are far more convenient to approach, even when they prompt a fake news backlash from the press.

It should be said that a greater range of voices, ethnicities and historical perspectives is an absolute must for the benefit of the students and the culture at large. That this would be in part solved from more diversity in senior positions in universities. At the more difficult end of the debate, perhaps we can think about what values are important to remain in the canon alongside those we wish to add.

Decimation of School Arts Impacting on Science and Medicine
 30/10/2018
 In "News"

If You Can't Get a Job Start a Business
 17/07/2010
 In "Society"

Essential oils not so cuddly
 It's been obvious for a long time that sniffing hippies can be dangerous to your health. The stink of patchouli in the morning has long been 21/10/2011
 In "News"

- ART
- CURRICULUM
- DECOLONISING
- EDUCATION

About Michael Eden > 77 Articles

Michael Eden is the Arts Editor for Trebuchet Magazine, an artist and researcher working in London and the south east, his artistic practice is concentrated on painting and he divides his time between this and lecturing in art history and contextual studies.

in

« PREVIOUS
 China/Art/Soft Power: speak softly and carry a big stick!

NEXT »
 Tearing Up Social Mores: The Party

BE THE FIRST TO COMMENT

Leave a Reply

Your email address will not be published.

Comment

Name *

Email *

Website

Save my name, email, and website in this browser for the next time I comment.

eight - one =

Notify me of follow-up comments by email.

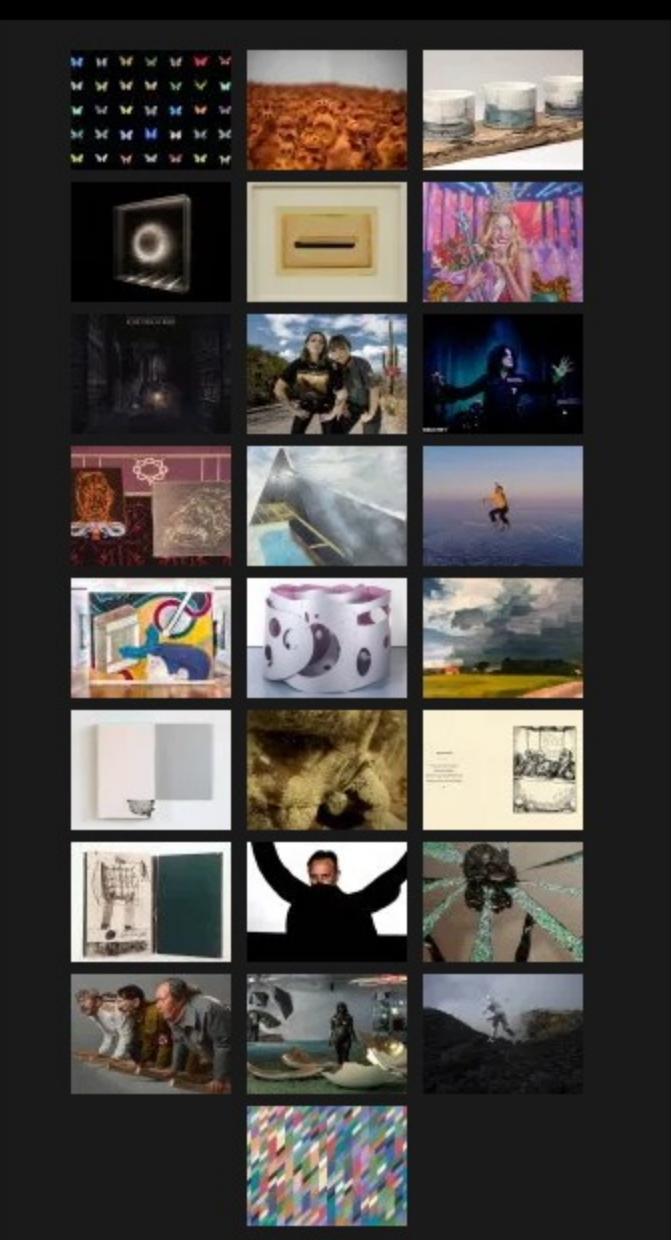

Notify me of new posts by email.

POST COMMENT

This site uses Akismet to reduce spam. Learn how your comment data is processed.

NEW CYCLES IN ART

- Awaken Imagined Still Lives
18/11/2019
- No Heroic Male Master
12/11/2019
- Jane Bustin's V - Tea Bowls (and Other Things) in Paris
31/10/2019
- Cyril de Commarque Interview
26/10/2019
- Modern Panic Celebrates 10th Anniversary
25/10/2019
- Artificialis at the Saatchi Gallery
24/10/2019
- Mark Leckey: O' Magic Power of Bleakness
17/10/2019
- Joker, a Film to Fall Out Over?
10/10/2019
- 1-54 African Contemporary Arts Fair 2019
09/10/2019
- William Kentridge In Praise of Shadows
03/10/2019

THE TREBUCHET

Trebuchet Magazine: New line art for contemporary collectors and abundant creatives

TREBUCHET NEWSLETTER SIGN UP

email address

MEDIA AND PUBLISHING

LATEST ISSUE

07: Portraits