In what ways can fashion and making activate positive change in a community?

'Making for Change: Waltham Forest' is a project that uses fashion activism and making as catalysts for positive change in the borough, with the aim to activate long-term legacies.

This showcase invites the visitor to experience the outcomes of the project's activities in education, manufacturing, and community engagement. The project has contributed to developing makers' skills and career pathways, nurturing a culture of fellowship, and activating radical change locally.
