5. Fake-out a Social Media platform

Social Media platforms such as Facebook are based on gathering and trading data. They want to connect you to people/products/companies/ideas which you are likely to engage with. One way to make this process more visible is to create an alternate profile which is very different to your 'real' persona and see what the Social Media platform throws at you. For example, a colleague has set up a profile of a 109 year old woman (who is now 117) in Facebook. (technically quite easy if you have a spare/alternate email address)

Aspects to consider:

1. What platform(s) will this work well in?
2. How will you capture the process?
3. How often are you going to engage in this between now and reporting back?
4. Where are you going to post your thoughts on the process? (could be in the comments below)

Zuckerberg was chatting with an unnamed friend, apparently in early 2004. Business Insider, which has a series of quite juicy anecdotes about Facebook's early days, takes the credit for this one.

The exchange apparently ran like this:

Zuck: Yeah so if you ever need info about anyone at Harvard

Zuck: Just ask.

Zuck: I have over 4,000 emails, pictures, addresses, SNS

[Redacted Friend's Name]: What? How'd you manage that one?

Zuck: People just submitted it.

Zuck: I don't know why.

Zuck: They "trust me"

Zuck: Dumb fucks

3. Your commitments to Facebook and our community

We provide these services to you and others to help advance our mission. In exchange, we need you to make the following commitments:

1. Who can use Facebook

When people stand behind their opinions and actions, our community is safer and more accountable. For this reason, you must:

- Use the same name that you use in everyday life.
- Provide accurate information about yourself.
- Create only one account (your own) and use your timeline for personal purposes.
- Not share your password, give access to your Facebook account to others or transfer your account to anyone else (without our permission).

Privacy for anyone anywhere

Tails is a live operating system that you can start on almost any computer from a USB stick or a DVD.

It aims at preserving your privacy and anonymity, and helps you to:

- use the Internet anonymously and circumvent censorship; all connections to the Internet are forced to go through the Tor network;
- leave no trace on the computer you are using unless you ask it explicitly;
- use state-of-the-art cryptographic tools to encrypt your files, emails and instant messaging.

Ai Weiwei

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

For the documentary film about the artist, see Ai Weiwei: Never Sorry.

This is a Chinese name; the family name is Ai.

Ai Weiwei (Chinese: 艾未未; pinyin: Ài Wèiwèi, [ⓘ] English pronunciation (help·info); born 28 August 1957 in Beijing) is a Chinese contemporary artist and activist. His father's (Ai Qing) original surname was written Jiang (蔣).^{[1][2][3]} Ai collaborated with Swiss architects Herzog & de Meuron as the artistic consultant on the Beijing National Stadium for the 2008 Summer Olympics.^[4] As a political activist, he has been highly and openly critical of the Chinese Government's stance on democracy and human rights. He has investigated government corruption and cover-ups, in particular the Sichuan schools corruption scandal following the collapse of "tofu-dreg schools" in the 2008 Sichuan earthquake.^[5] In 2011, following his arrest at Beijing Capital International Airport on 3 April, he was held for 81 days without any official charges being filed; officials alluded to their allegations of "economic crimes".^[6]

Since being allowed to leave China in 2015, he has been living in Berlin, Germany, with his family, working on installations, and traveling extensively.^[7]
