A QUARTER of London flat-sharers are so hard up that a rent rise of just £25 a month would force them to move out, according to a survey.
One in 10 say their personal finances are so precarious that even a £10 increase would make them seek new accommodation. If the rise was as much as £50 almost half of flat-sharers

HANDS ON PUNK

A PUNK POSTER ZINE

WORKSHOP

The Design Activism Research Hub (DARH) at London College of Communication runs a hands-on workshop on the theme of DIY graphics - create collages, posters and typographic layouts with simple tools and techniques on the working theme of Love and Hate. Get an insight into the fundamental principles of punk art and design and the longstanding heritage of home-made, do-it-yourself visual communication.

BRIEF

Create your own artwork the Punk 'DIY' way... without a smartphone or computer!

Eh?

Create an authentic punk poster in 2 colours using simple, effective techniques such as collage, photocopy and stencils. Don't worry, we're here to help.

Grrrr: Love & Hate

Express yourself - what do you Love + what do you Hate?

What do I get?

As well as taking your creation home, the posters will be on display at the Design Museum throughout the day and bound together later into a souvenir 'book'.

Come and have some anarchic DIY fun!

NOTE

The workshop took place two days after the historic EU referendum vote in the UK, the so called Brexit. For this reason, most of their participant appropriately channeled their creative anger to the ~~twats~~ politician that dominated the hate debate on mainstream and social media during the previous months.

Londoners to be the most Britons (after the Scots) with more than a third of the capital's population born abroad, this is hardly surprising. At Tate Modern on Sunday I heard a word of English spoken, or remain in Europe?" can have meaning to many of our Londoners.

Amid the cacophony almost the entire London establishment has decided on Sunday to vote for Remain. This embraces a majority of MPs, the new Mayor Sadiq Khan, the City, the West End, the arts, science and academia. I have observed only cabbies and the Conservative press voting for Leave.

At the start of the campaign I wrote here that, for the capital, in or out of the EU would make little difference. If today Britain votes out, London's bankers, businesses and politicians will bust a gut to scramble back in. By hook or by crook they will cut deals, negotiate and really mean it.

By virtue of sheer scale London's cosmopolitan industries of finance, tourism, education and health will continue to prosper. As a world city it looks more to the outside world, especially to New York, than to Paris or Berlin. The world's rich will continue arriving to get richer and avoid tax, and the world's poor will continue arriving to get poorer.

But there is a real danger that the streets paved with gold will be wiped even more clean by the hysteria of the world's rich. The world's rich will continue arriving to get richer and avoid tax, and the world's poor will continue arriving to get poorer.

vote Leave

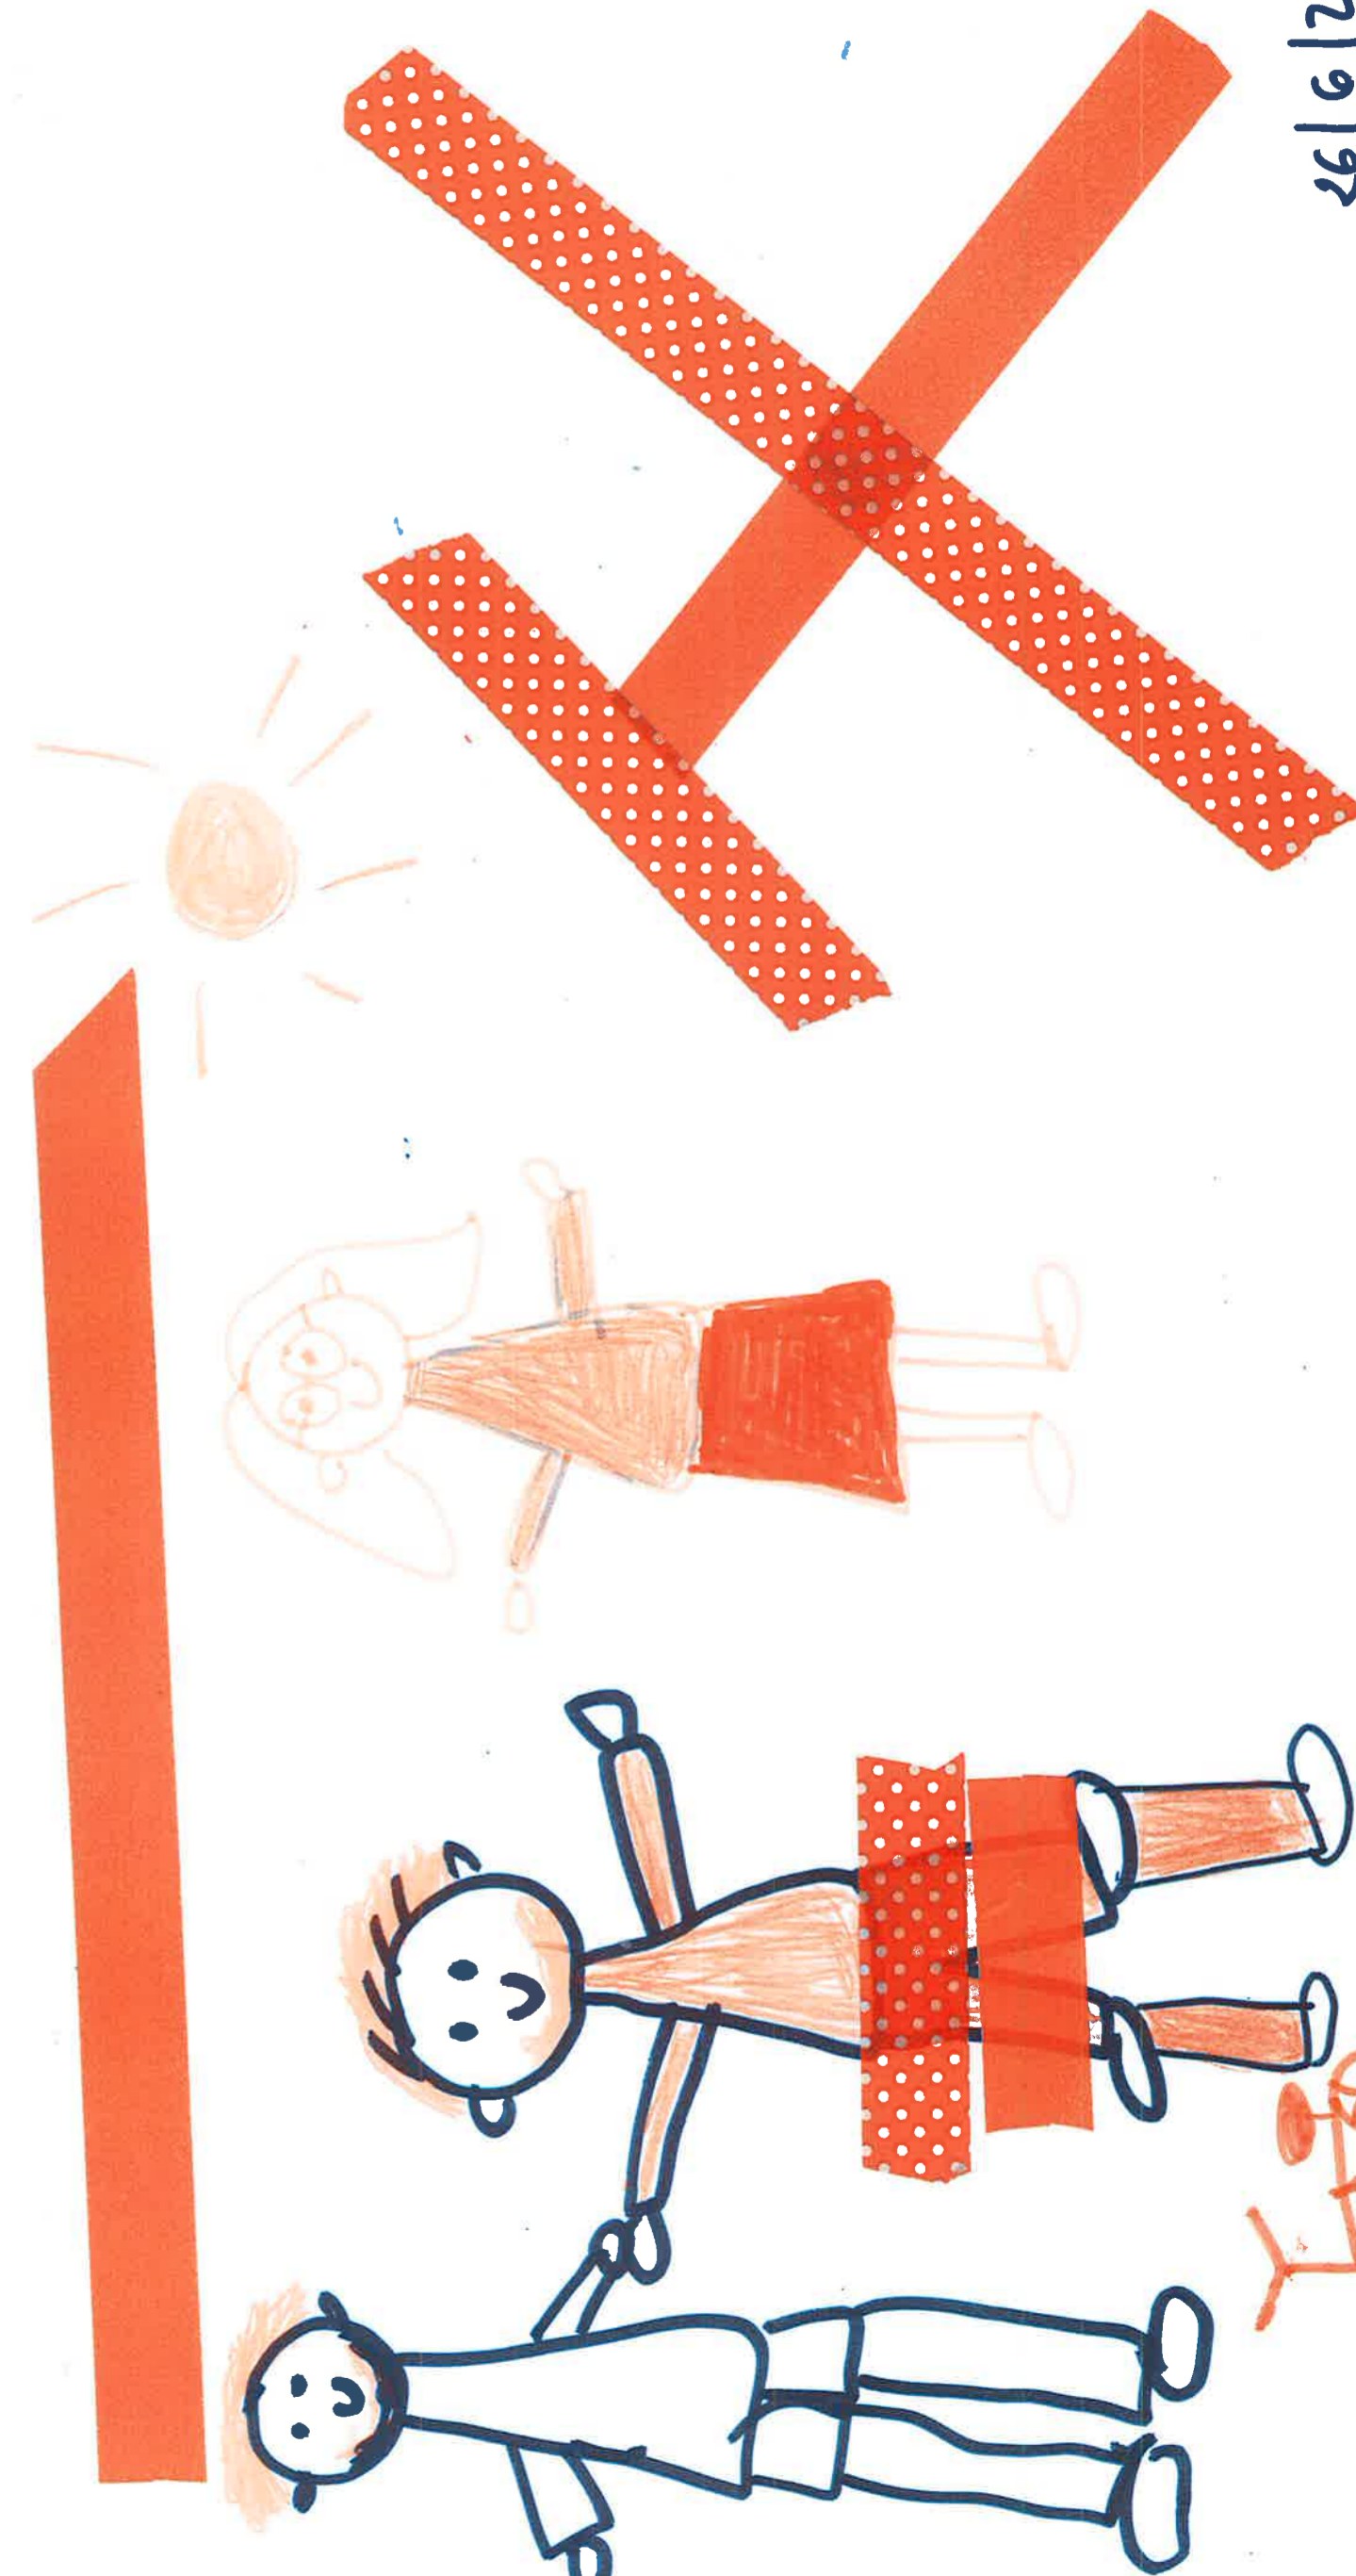

THE UK is the second largest economy in the EU and the fifth largest in the world. When the heat and noise of the EU referendum has passed and politicians in Europe have once again to calculate the interests of their electorates, the EU will want to continue to trade with us.

We will continue to be proud Europeans, just as much as the Norwegians or the Swiss and anyone else. Our shared history and culture, our enduring friendship and support, our very defence engagements through Nato - these all built on much stronger grounds than any allegiance to Brussels.

Just an allegiance to Brussels. The reality is that we must take control of our borders. The free movement of people across the continent would be laudable if it did not mean that we would be unable to control our borders. But if we cross the continent, we will be unable to control our borders. But if we cross the continent, we will be unable to control our borders.
