This is an absolutely delightful book: perceptive, entertaining, and wise, yet also immensely practical. If you want your students to grow, in your hands, as creative thinkers, read this—and get them to read it, too.

—Guy Claxton, author of Building Learning Power and What's the Point of School?

Alison James is Associate Dean, Learning and Teaching at the London College of Fashion and is a Principal Fellow of the Higher Education Academy in the UK. She has worked in creative arts education for 20 years, in which time she has taught students at all levels, run a learning support service, carried out extensive staff development on all aspects of pedagogy, and conducted research into student learning through personal and professional development.

Stephen D. Brookfield is Distinguished University Professor at the University of St. Thomas in Minneapolis, Minnesota. For more than 40 years, he has taught in England, Canada, Australia, and the United States. A four-time winner of the Cyril O.
